Professional Learning Communities as a Means for Bringing Teacher Professionalization in Teacher Education

PLC as an instrument for strengthening the teaching profession

If PLCs is an instrument of professionalization in the teaching profession and needs to be well established in schools, student-teachers, as soon-to-be teachers, should become familiar with it already during their teacher education at university. Courses on practical issues at university as much as phases of internship/practicum offer the opportunity to anticipate the later job, to practice and to reflect on this practical experience.
